RCMP team to determine if charges due in avalanche

REVELSTOKE The RCMP is investigating whether criminal charges should be laid in a deadly avalanche near Revelstoke, B.C., that they say was triggered by snow-mobilers.

A 10-person team from the major crimes unit is looking into the events surrounding the Boulder Mountain slide and trying to determine who organized the unsanctioned Big Iron Shoot-Out. No one has stepped up to take responsibility for the event in which two men died and 31 others were hurt.

Cpl. Dan Moskaluk said given the unique circumstances, he expects the investigation to be long and complex.

Senior murdered: Police

Death of wheelchair-bound man city's fifth homicide of year

MIRANDA MINASSIAN for Metro Ottawa

Ottawa police are investigating the city's fifth homicide for 2010 — the death of a wheelchair-bound man yesterday, blocks away from the University of Ottawa.

Police would only confirm that the deceased is male, however, neighbours identified the victim as Larry Chartier, a man in his 70s.

Police were called at about 2 a.m. to an Ottawa Community Housing seniors complex at 721

Chapel Cres.

Harry McGinnis, Chartier's next door neighbour, was woken up and questioned by the police early yesterday morning.

McGinnis told police that he hadn't heard anything unusual from the apartment next door.

"He was a quiet guy," said McGinnis. "He was harmless and he kept to himself."

Will Harbour, a resident of the same building, described Chartier as a lonely man who was estranged from his wife and kids. Harbour said Chartier had been living in the building for less than a year.

"He really missed his wife and kids. He was hoping to go back to Montreal to be near them," said Harbour. "Nobody wanted him dead."

Police arrived after 10 a.m. and taped off the back parking lot and the area around Chartier's back door. A detective was seen scanning the dumpster.

The incident has neighbours rattled. Many said the incident is not the first to give police a reason to visit the building.

"This is pretty scary," said resident Linda Henderson. "There are a lot of things happening here."

An autopsy was scheduled for late yesterday.

A coroner removes the body of a man after police were called to 721 Chapel Cres. at 2 a.m. yesterday to investigate a suspicious death.

Newest transit fine unnecessary: Councillor

TIM WIECLAWSKI
tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

OC TRANSPO With an automated announcement system on the way, another $12,500 penalty against OC Transpo for drivers failing to call out major stops is unnecessary, insists the head of the city's transit committee.

"I don't see how this fine is going to help matters any," said Bay Ward Coun. Alex Cullen. "These fines divert taxpayers' money. We've got the message. We're doing the best we can. We're bringing in the new system."

Yesterday, the Canadian Transportation Agency issued a second fine against Ottawa's transit service for failing to comply with a 2007 ruling requiring drivers to call out stops.

The previous fine, issued in July 2009, was for a first-time penalty of $5,000.

Cullen said drivers are calling out over 80 per cent of stops and the city is bringing a next-stop announcement system online later this year.

"There is a reason why most major transit operations on this continent have automated systems," said Cullen. "We don't keep drivers on the same routes all the time. There are traffic and passenger issues that come up and demand the drivers' attention."

Charges laid after alleged extortion

CRIME Police have charged two Ottawa men and are seeking a third following an extortion and forcible confinement incident at Algonquin College.

Police said yesterday that just before 1 p.m. on March 11, a student was approached by a male known to him and asked to accompany him to meet two other males in a washroom.

Once in the washroom, the victim was said to be grabbed, held down and searched. The suspects allegedly took personal items and demanded he accompany them to a bank machine in the 1900 block of Baseline Road, where an undisclosed amount of money was withdrawn.

The victim reported the incident to Ottawa police, who arrested two males.

Hussein Ismail Abdi, 19, and Otoniel Velasquez, 20, are charged.

Police are seeking a man of Middle Eastern descent, who is 18 to 25 years old and six feet tall with a thin build.

Landlords want tax ratio lowered

REPORT The tax ratio for multi-residential units has gone down over the past decade, but landlords in Ottawa insist it needs to be reduced even further.

The multi-residential tax ratio is the difference that the owners of condominiums and apartments have to pay compared to residential property owners.

Last year, city council set the multi-residential tax ratio at 1.7, meaning apartment owners had to pay 70 cents more per dollar paid by homeowners.

On Monday, the city's audit budget and finance committee will consider a staff report recommending that the city hold the ratio at its current level.

The report states that Ottawa has one of the lowest multi-residential tax ratios in the province.

However, John Dickie, chair of the Eastern Ontario Landlord Organization, said the report is seriously flawed.

The multi-residential class includes all properties with more than six residential units under one title, including rowhouses, walk-up apartments and mid-to-high-rise buildings.

Dickie said forcing apartment owners to pay the same taxes as condo owners is a flawed system, because condos tend to be much larger and have a much greater value than apartment units.

"That's not fair," Dickie said. "The two units being compared are not the same."

In 2000, the multi-residential ratio was set at 2.34. Since then it has slowly decreased to 1.7.

ELO is asking for it to be around 1.4 for apartment units.

Go greener, speaker urges

Advice on offer at Go Green Expo

When it comes to going green, most people will do the basics, said Ottawa resident David Chernushenko.

They'll recycle their paper and plastics, use energy-efficient bulbs, and use the green bins that the city introduced earlier this year.

"We all love to talk a green story, but most of us have really only begun to dabble in what is truly possible," said Chernushenko. "Most will do the really easy stuff, which is great, but it's not great if they're using it as an excuse not to go any further."

The Ottawa-based green-economy educator and living-lightly promoter is a featured speaker at this weekend's Ottawa Go Green Expo at Lansdowne Park, where he'll tell people how they can get more involved.

"What's keeping people from going so much further is one, the perception that it's going to be so much sacrifice, and two, what's the point of doing it if someone else is doing it?" he said.

"We have to get people to shift together and see that this is an exciting form of progress."

"What I discovered in making the film is that we have the possibility of living very well, consuming far less energy and generating most, if not all of it, with renewable forms of energy. The film shows that people like you and me in communities just like ours are already taking big strides."

The expo will feature hundreds of exhibitors, home and garden ideas, eco-friendly food and clothing, and transportation options dedicated to helping people live green.

The Transportation Safety Board of Canada listed nine critical safety issues facing the country's transport system yesterday.

While the list identifies safety issues in the air, marine and rail modes, collisions at railway crossings top the list.

"We are pleased with how the lessons learned from the thousands of accidents we have investigated have made transportation safer," TSB chair Wendy Tadros said yesterday in Ottawa.

"However, the board knows from hard experience that if a persistent problem is not addressed, there will be another accident. Airlines, ferries, railways — we're talking about tens of millions of trips annually. We need to tackle the issue on our watchlist now to make the system safer. Our watchlist provides a blueprint for a safer transportation system and that is our goal.

"The watchlist is a means of focusing on the nine most critical issues we see," said Tadros. "These are issues that have arisen in investigation after investigation ... it is time for the industry and the government to work together."

In the rail industry, new recorders are being phased in, but because locomotives last so long, the process will take 20 to 30 years, she said.

"We call on the rail industry to step up the pace," Tadros said.

Agency records show 380 incidents at railway crossings in the last 15 years — one every two weeks — and 106 deaths due to collisions between vehicles and passenger trains.

The collisions continue despite advance warning signs and, at about one-third of public crossings, flashing lights, bells and gates.

Harper snuffs pot wishes

Stephen Harper may be using "new media" to reach younger voters but he's not going to grant them their favourite wish: to legalize pot. # Tories want harsher youth crime rules

The Tory government wants to tighten the Youth Criminal Justice Act to give judges more power to consider "denunciation and deterrence" when sentencing violent offenders.

Justice Minister Rob Nicholson also wants to be able to charge and sentence youths with violent criminal acts when they engage in reckless behaviour — such as a car chase — that endangers the public but doesn't actually injure anyone.

"This legislation will simplify the rules to keep these offenders off the streets when necessary to protect society," Nicholson said at a news conference yesterday, flanked by the mothers of two youths who died at the hands of young offenders.

"In the handling of other violent and repeat young offenders, the court often lacks the tools necessary to impose appropriate sentences," said Nicholson. He cited the example of young offender who "demonstrates repeat criminal behaviour, or a casual attitude to the law, or a complete lack of empathy for his or her victim."

Liberals and the Bloc Quebecois immediately denounced the changes as a regressive move toward retribution in the justice system, as opposed to rehabilitation. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Upping seal quota 'a little stupid' given market: Fisherman

EAST COAST A fisherman with more than 50 years of experience hunting seals says there's no sense in raising the allowable catch for the mammals until market conditions improve.

The Department of Fisheries and Oceans announced Monday it's raising the quota for this year's East Coast hunt by 50,000 harp seals.

But Jack Troake, a veteran sealer, said the gesture "sounds a little stupid," given a market where seals only fetch about $15 each — a steep drop from the record $105 per pelt in 2006.

Opponents, meanwhile, said upping the quota is one in a series of political stunts that began last May when Gov. Gen. Michaëlle Jean sampled a slice of raw seal heart in Rankin Inlet.

Flaherty said Greece's debt troubles were a timely reminder that world leaders need to agree on lasting international financial reform, and that tackling big deficits is necessary to restore confi-

"We're obviously concerned about bumps in the road as we move forward with economic recovery from the crisis," Flaherty told reporters in London. "Issues like the situation in Greece are of concern."

"We look forward to other developed nations in the world showing their plans to move out of deficit towards balanced budgets over time," he added.

Parliament debates GE seeds

REGULATIONS Members of Parliament are debating a private member's bill this week that its proponents say would fill a critical gap in regulations governing genetically engineered seeds.

The bill presented by NDP agriculture critic Alex Atamanenko would require an analysis of potential harm to export markets before sales of new genetically engineered seeds are allowed.

Canadian approvals are based on environmental and health assessments, but Atamanenko says they ignore potential effects on export markets.

Canada's flax industry was shut out of the European Union, which buys 70 per cent of Canadian flax and has a policy against genetically modified organisms, after traces were found.

Jogger killed by plane

Wrong place, wrong time as aircraft crash-lands on beach

A father of two on business in Hilton Head, South Carolina, was jogging on the beach and listening to his iPod when he was hit from behind and killed by a small plane making an emergency landing, officials said yesterday.

Robert Gary Jones, 38, of Georgia, died instantly Monday evening when he was hit by the single-engine plane, which had lost its propeller, said Beaufort County Coroner Ed Allen. The pilot's vision was blocked by oil on the windshield.

The coroner said Jones apparently did not see or hear the plane, which was "basically gliding."

His mother, Pauline Jones, said yesterday that he

"I've got a lot of issues going on right now. I've got a plane that's all torn up. And I've got a young man that I killed."

Edward Smith, owner and pilot of the plane that hit man on a South Carolina beach was in Hilton Head for work but was supposed to fly home to suburban Atlanta today for his daughter's third birthday.

Federal Aviation Administration records show the experimental Lancair IV-P plane that hit Robert Jones was registered to Edward I. Smith of Virginia.

Smith was on the beach with his plane yesterday and confirmed he was the pilot.

He said he did not want to talk about the crash and offered few details.

"I've got a lot of issues going on right now. I've got a plane that's all torn up. And I've got a young man that I killed," he said.

The plane started leaking oil at about 4,000 metres and tried originally to make it to Hilton Head Airport, said fire and rescue spokeswoman Joheida Fister.

The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board were investigating.

Bloody, but not violent, protest

THAILAND Thai protesters seeking a change of government turned to shock tactics yesterday, pouring litres of their own blood into a glistening puddle at the gate of the prime minister's office. The dramatic gesture, repeated in front of the headquarters of Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva's Democrat Party, grabbed attention but put the "Red Shirt" protest movement no closer to its goal of forcing new elections.

More than 100,000 demonstrators from all over the country gathered in Bangkok on Sunday, vowing to keep up their protest until victory. But Abhisit has rejected their demands to dissolve Parliament, saying only that he will listen to the protesters' point of view and leaving the situation in a stalemate.

Reporters asked one of Protesters hold a bottle of donated blood before spilling it in front of Thailand's Government House yesterday in Bangkok.

the protest leaders what their next move would be, and Veera Musikapong replied, "I want to know that myself."

Thousands of Red Shirts formed long lines yesterday morning to have their blood drawn by nurses, a day after their leaders vowed to collect at least 1,000 litres of blood to spill at Government House.

Anti-Israeli clashes break out in Jerusalem

MIDDLE EAST Hundreds of Palestinians in east Jerusalem set tires and garbage bins ablaze yesterday and hurled rocks at Israeli riot police, who responded with rubber bullets and tear gas. The heaviest clashes in months broke out as an American envoy abruptly cancelled a visit, deepening a U.S.-Israeli diplomatic feud. Angered by plans for more Jewish housing in predominantly Arab east Jerusalem, Palestinians clashed with Israeli forces throughout the day. The diplomatic dispute with the U.S. was sparked by Israel's announcement last week of plans for 1,600 apartments in east Jerusalem.

Chile raises quake death toll to 700

CHILE The earthquake and tsunami that struck Chile last month killed 700 people and caused damages of nearly $30 billion US, according to the government. And the ground hasn't stopped shaking. A magnitude-6.7 aftershock rocked south-central Chile Monday night, adding to the raw nerves and mounting damages caused by the Feb. 27 quake.

Chile's Interior Minister Rodrigo Hinzpeter updated the known death and damage toll yesterday, saying 200 people previously listed as missing would be added to the count of 500 previously known dead.

A senior provincial official said a ransom was paid for the freedom of Sahil Saeed, but he did not identify who abducted the boy and received the money.

Saeed was found in a small village in Punjab province, where armed rob-authorities have said someone in the family was involved in the abduction — a charge the family denies. One relative also said yesterday that no ransom was paid.

Scandal baffles church leaders

CONFERENCE The Roman Catholic bishops in Pope Benedict XVI's native Bavaria sought yesterday to deal with a sexual abuse scandal whose ever-widening scope has left church leaders baffled.

"I would not have expected such a multitude of cases," Bavarian Bishop Ludwig Schick, who is hosting his colleagues' meeting at Vierzeheiligen, Germany, told Bayerischer Rundfunk Radio.

He said he was shaken and ashamed of what had taken place within the church.

In Bavaria alone, more than 100 former students of Catholic institutions have come forward with claims of physical or sexual abuse. Some of those cases involve the prestigious Regensburg Domschatzen boys' choir once led by the Pope's older brother, Rev. Georg Ratzinger.

Feeling blue over the Planet Earth

TheWestView

metronews.ca/thewestview

What's 12 feet tall and blue all over? If you've seen the movie Avatar — and who hasn't? — you'll know the answer to that question is the Na'vi, the incredibly cool, nearly naked aliens with cornrows and braids who live on the incredibly cool, beautiful planet known as Pandora, all threatened by the technomilitary-industrial (and little) bad guys from Earth, who lust for a metaphorical mineral called "unobtanium."

That's us, folks. People have begun to notice a strange thing when they take off their 3-D glasses and re-enter the real world after a two-hour 40-minute exposure to Pandora. This beautiful place, inhabited by intelligent (and really tall) beings who have a direct link to Aywa, a.k.a. Mother Nature, is so vividly drawn that the planet we actually live on, Earth, seems like a giant slum.

Moviegoers are pouring their hearts out on blogs and chat rooms, all mourning the loss of Eden, er Earth, wishing they were cool and connected like the Na'vi.

There's at least one group that's not lying around in a Pandora-induced coma. The Ancient Forest Alliance, based in Victoria, gets Avatar and understands its value in spawning a whole new generation of Na'vi-loving environmentalists. Not daunted by the anti-global warming backlash, the alliance has picked a likely forest near Port Renfrew and dubbed it "Avatar Grove."

or via twitter @metroottawa

Sounds so much better than Tree Farm Licence No. 46.

We dare you, says the alliance, to clear-cut this little slice of Pandora on Earth. If I'm the Teal-Jones Group, which owns the licence, I'd send my PR department to the movie to take notes. Can you imagine Hollywood actresses in cornrows chained to trees, weeping for Avatar Grove? The Ancient Forest Alliance can.

It's entirely possible the Last Battle for the Planet Earth will be played out in Canada. After all, James Cameron, Avatar's creator, is Canadian; his art director studied the Athabasca oil-sands project for its lurid images of environmental destruction.

And British Columbia is one of the last Pandora-like preserves on Earth. Its ancient forests (sounds better than old growth, no?) protect 1,600 species at risk and 60 per cent of the nation's evergreen trees.

Even the Port Renfrew Chamber of Commerce, once a bastion of hewers of wood, now believes the best bet for the future is to save Avatar Grove for the tourists. If you loved the movie, stay tuned for the sequel — it's coming soon to an ancient forest near you.

Final cost of Toyota recall could reach $2B

A massive global recall, mounting legal bills and a battered reputation add up to a very expensive problem for Toyota.

How expensive? Depends who you ask.

With new developments emerging almost daily, predicting a final pricetag for the Japanese automaker is a daunting calculation that only some analysts have attempted.

The sole figure from Toyota itself came on Feb. 4 along with the company's October-December earnings results.

It estimated that the worldwide recall, now involving some 8.5 million cars, could cost up to 180 billion yen ($2.02 billion), with 100 billion yen for repairs and 80 billion yen in lost sales. It said the recalls may dent global demand for Toyota models by 100,000 vehicles.

Big price

- About 270,000 cars were recalled in Canada over the sticky brake pedal problems. At least 89 class-action lawsuits have been filed against the Japanese automaker, which could cost the company $3 billion or more.

Analysts with their own estimates say the total is bound to climb higher.

JP Morgan's Kohei Takahashi expects Toyota to take a one-time 500 billion yen ($5.6 billion) hit, including recall-related costs and litigation settlements. He has lowered his estimate for operating profit next fiscal year starting April to 540 billion yen ($6 billion) from 760 billion yen, as higher profit margins in emerging markets soften the blow of recall expenses.

Deutsche Securities estimates a 290 billion yen ($3.2 billion) impact to earnings in the coming fiscal year, though analyst Kurt Sanger acknowledges that any attempt to quantify the impact involves an almost certain degree of error.

"We expect Toyota to respond aggressively to win back much of its lost market share, but it will come at a cost," he said in a recent report.

Usually stingy with incentives, Toyota announced new deals recently to bring shoppers back into its showrooms in the U.S., a key market and the eye of the current storm. Existing Toyota owners who buy another vehicle from the company will receive two years of free maintenance. The automaker also is offering zero per cent financing and low-priced leases to customers who buy or lease several of the recalled vehicles, including Corollas, Camrys and Avalons.

Since the fall, Toyota has recalled more than six million vehicles in the United States because of acceleration problems and braking flaws. Regulators have linked 52 deaths to crashes allegedly caused by accelerator problems, and the recalls were the subject of three recent congressional hearings.

The bad publicity will likely send Toyota's market share in the U.S. to about 13 per cent in the January-March quarter from 17 per cent before the recalls began, according to Macquarie Securities.

Analyst Clive Wiggins estimates that market share next year will drop 1.2 percentage points from its previous forecast of 17.9 per cent, translating to an implied 144,900 fewer cars sold and $3.3 billion in lost sales. Toyota president Akio Toyoda apologized to customers about trouble caused by the recalls on his blog late Monday for the first time since the quality problems also hit Japan in February.

Toyota still expects to post a net profit of 80 billion yen ($899 million) in the next fiscal year.

MDS to focus on cost-cutting and nuclear medicine division

ISOTOPES Nuclear medicine company MDS Inc. has completed its strategic repositioning and will now focus on cost-cutting and improving its disrupted medical isotope business.

Ottawa-based MDS announced in September that it would sell off most of its business units to focus on its Nordion nuclear medicine division, which sells radioactive isotopes used in medical imaging and sterilization.

Steve West, who stepped in as chief executive in January, said yesterday that the company closed the sale of the last of its non-core assets in early March.

MDS shareholders recently approved a motion to change the company's name to Nordion Inc., to reflect its new focus and MDS is working to implement the changes.

West said the company will focus this year on completing the transition. THE CANADIAN PRESS

VEHICLES Honda is recalling hundreds of thousands of vehicles in Canada and the United States after some of the Japanese carmaker's customers complained about the feel of brake pedals.

WestJet to continue pursuit of international markets: New CEO

AIRLINE WestJet Airlines Ltd. will continue to press into international markets through deals with other carriers, the company's new incoming chief executive said yesterday.

The Calgary-based discount airline already has plans to roll out code-share deals with Air France, the Netherlands' KLM and Texas-based Southwest Airlines.

Building on that, WestJet wants to see traffic from Asia, South America and elsewhere in Europe come to Canada on its network. Gregg Saretsky told a news conference, a day after the surprising resignation of Sean Durfy as president and CEO, effective April 1.

Durfy

- WestJet announced late Monday that Durfy, 43, would step down for personal reasons.

Gesturing to a model of the small Boeing 737 planes WestJet currently has in its fleet, Saretsky said: "I don't think you'll see this aircraft flying across the Pacific anytime soon. So code-share arrangements — which allow passengers to seamlessly travel from one airline's network to another — are the only way to achieve that international growth. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Woods says he will return for Masters

GOLF For Tiger Woods, this figures to be a Masters like no other.

Woods said yesterday that he will end more than four months of seclusion and play at Augusta National in three weeks, shielded by the most secure environment in golf as he competes for the first time since a sex scandal shattered his image.

"The Masters is where I won my first major and I view this tournament with great respect," Woods said in a statement. "After a long and necessary time away from the game, I feel like I'm ready to start my season at Augusta."

The Masters begins April 8.

No other major championship attracts such a large television audience, and that's under normal circumstances.

Already the most popular figure in golf with his 82 worldwide victories and 14 majors — four of them at the Masters — Woods returns as a disgraced star who will be under the greatest scrutiny of his career.

"We're all looking forward to having him back. We want him playing," Jim Furyk said. "I'm sure we're also looking forward to everything being business as usual. And it's going to take awhile. We know that."

Volt charges ahead

GM delivers on electric car promise

JIL MCINTOSH
for Metro Canada

While there's still more than a year to go before its scheduled launch, Chevrolet's Volt is getting closer. From a concept unveiled in early 2007, it's now a model that starts, stops and drives — and I got the chance to do that in Vancouver.

I went less than 20 kilometres at low speeds, but notably, it was what automakers call an "integration vehicle," the first time the technology and design have come together. This isn't exactly what will go on sale, but final changes will probably be minor.

While it has a gasoline engine, electric motor and lithium-ion battery, Volt isn't a hybrid.

Rather, it's an extended-range vehicle that always uses electricity to power the wheels. After it's recharged by plugging into a wall outlet, it travels about 64 km.

Once the battery runs down, a 1.4-litre gasoline engine starts up and acts like a generator to supply more electricity.

That's a major difference from an all-electric car, which won't travel any further once its battery is depleted.

Volt was designed to the 64-km threshold because, as GM says, 75 per cent of Canadians drive less than that each day. In theory, many Volt owners will never burn any gasoline, other than the occasional start-up programmed into the engine to keep its fluids flowing.

Driving it is unremarkable, and I mean that as a compliment.

While the Chevy Volt has a gasoline engine, electric motor and lithium-ion battery, Volt isn't a hybrid. Rather, it's an extended-range vehicle that always uses electricity to power the wheels.

It doesn't feel much different than a conventional car, which should appeal to many buyers: No learning curve, no unusual requirements, and nothing unfamiliar. Press a button, put the shifter into drive, and put your foot on the accelerator pedal.

It feels peppy, and has a "Sport" button that adds a turbo-like power boost for hills and highway passing. Regenerative braking and deceleration put some charge back into the battery.

Smartphone way to buy used

AutoPilot

Michael Goetz

metronews.ca/autopilot

A wise sage once opined that, "Knowledge is Power." This prompted another sage to suggest that such power is best used to make other people feel stupid.

True enough. But perhaps you're in the market for a used car. In that case, you're probably more interested in obtaining knowledge, to transform yourself into a powerful super hero, one able to leap into a great used vehicle, at a really great price, all in a single bound.

We now have a new Canadian company, vehiclegateway.com, to help us bulk up on used-vehicle expertise and muscle — and through our cellphones no less.

But company spokesperson, Peter Davies, told me not to think of it as an app. "In my opinion it's superior to an app," said Davies. "It requires no downloading. All you have to do is go to vehiclegateway.com on your BlackBerry, iPhone, or any phone with browser capability, and you are presented with a 'mobile' version of the site."

Vehiclegateway.com is similar to sites like AutoTrader and Autonet, which offer lots of vehicles for sale, from both dealers and private sellers.

But vehiclegateway.com will differentiate itself from the pack, says Davies, by being the first to combine several crucial elements, such as: cellphone accessibility; free listings for private sellers; an increased level of information on each specific vehicle; a special section devoted to vehicles that fall under the automakers' certified programs; and the first used Canadian used-vehicle site to offer a link to obtain vehicle history reports from CAR-FAX.

The cellphone access will purportedly help your negotiating position. Davies tells me to picture myself on a used car lot, contemplating a nice shiny ride. How do I know if the price is fair? By punching the year and model of the vehicle into vehiclegateway.com, and asking it to generate an "average price" for all such vehicles currently listed there.

It's up to you then, whether you shove the cellphone screen into the seller's face, or sign the papers.

While sites like Kijiji and Craigslist also offer free listings for private sellers, Davies notes they are not geared specifically for automotive buyers, and both have their share of unscrupulous sellers.

"People are scared of buying a lemon," adds Davies. He hopes his site "will help remove some of the apprehension associated with buying used."

It will do that, according to Davies, by asking sellers to fill out a detailed vehicle questionnaire on each vehicle listed.

While sellers are still on the honour system, Davies believes it should weed out sellers who are prone to hyperbole, and allow buyers to narrow their search.

Another apprehension squasher will be the CAR-FAX vehicle history reports (available for an extra fee).

Like CarProof.com, it can reveal how many times the vehicle has changed hands and when, where it's been licensed, and if it has incurred any insurance claims for accident damage.

"How do I know if the price is fair? By punching the year and model of the vehicle into vehiclegateway.com, and asking it to generate an 'average price' for all such vehicles currently listed there."

All this information technology is wonderful, but I would still caution that buyers get a trustworthy mechanic to get all touchy-feely with any used vehicle they're ready to pounce on.

Any used vehicle will need work. The extent of work needed is what you want to establish — it's your super-human right to know.

The evolving engineer

An industry that touches all walks of life has changed a lot in recent years

JON TATTIE
for Metro Canada

From the pyramids of Egypt to Parliament Hill in Ottawa, the history of engineering tells the history of humanity.

Marie Carter, Engineers Canada's chief operating officer, said engineering only became a modern profession in the last century. It was born out of disaster, when a bridge built to cross the Saint Lawrence River collapsed in 1907. An engineering mistake was to blame and it cost the lives of 75 people. An incident in Engineering has changed a lot over the years, from the pyramids, to steam locomotive, to computer engineering.

1916 claimed more lives.

"The Canadian Society of Civil Engineers determined, 'We need to do something about this,'" Carter said from her Ottawa office. "We need to have some checks and balances on who does engineering. They need to be properly trained."

Throughout the 1920s, engineering became increasingly regulated and the tradition of the Iron Ring was born. Originally built from the ruins of the Quebec bridge and now fashioned from stainless steel, each Canadian engineering student is presented a ring in a somber ceremony accompanying graduation.

Carter said scientific "trial and error" steadily improved the building blocks engineers use to build our world ever since.

"Just about everything that you see, do, touch, have as recreation, live with, use to eat, even the food, has got engineering involved in it," she said. "Engineers do touch just about every aspect of the way we live."

Allan Marble has seen the discipline transformed in his 50-plus years as an engineer, but it's not hard for the professor emeritus at Halifax's Dalhousie University to sum up what changed: The computer.

When Marble attended Dalhousie in the 1950s, it was a computer-free land. He vividly remembers the first time he saw a computer in 1962. It was primordial and clunky, but it revolutionized engineering.

In today's wired world, it seems hard to imagine slide rulers doing the job of computers, and that's because they didn't.

"It's an amazing change, really," Marble said over the phone from his Halifax home, adding that it's especially transformed electrical engineering.

"You're trying to analyze signals coming from various sources," he explains. "To do that before the computer, you had to do it by hand."

Now, a computer can work in real time at speeds well beyond human ability.

Computers made it possible for engineers to develop life-saving CT scanners and MRIs. "The amount of calculations done to get a CT image or an MRI image is just mind-boggling. Those things could never be done before the computer," he said.

The Dragons return to their lair

Season finale of the Den takes an intimate look at where the dragons came from

Dragons' Den

Dianne Buckner

metronews.ca/dragonsden

What does it take to climb the corporate ladder right to the top? Wouldn't you love to know how to make the move from working stiff, to fabulously wealthy mogul?

That is the subject of The Road to Riches, the season finale of Dragons' Den tonight. The program tells the life stories of all five Dragons, none of whom were born into money, but who all found a way to parlay their abilities into huge business success.

There are a lot of revelations in the show: Who knew Kevin O'Leary looked like such a bad boy teenager, with long hair and a haze of smoke around him in every shot! Brett Wilson is unbelievably open, sharing deeply personal stories. There's an emotional scene where it's clear Robert Herjavec's heart is still aching over his mother's death.

We also get to visit with Arlene Dickinson and her four children at her sunny, southern getaway, and meet the partner who helped Jim Treliving along his journey from RCMP officer to savvy businessman.

What struck me most though is how hard every one of them worked. Consider Jim's experience at his first Boston Pizza franchise.

"I cooked, I did the prep

"I'm no more special, I'm no better. I started out where we can all start. And if I was able to do it in a great country like Canada, then anyone can."

in the morning, did all the stuff to get ready for opening," he says. "And then I cut pizza. After we closed at three in the morning I'd scrub the floor." He says he didn't have a day off for two-and-a-half years!

No wonder he enjoys his condo in Vancouver so much, along with the many trips he takes by private jet, to events like the Masters Tournament!

Robert too, was a hard worker, first as a waiter and then later as a highly ambitious salesman. "People always tell you it's about who you know, it's about your connections," he says. "And granted, if you have that, it's easier. But it's also a load of crap. All it means is that you just gotta work harder."

Herjavec encourages everyone to try. "I'm no more special, I'm no better. I started out where we can all start. And if I was able to do it in a great country like Canada, then anyone can."

But there's more to it all than money, of course. Brett shares what he told his son. "I really want you to think about success as happiness. And if your needs are many, you may never be happy. But if your needs are few and easily met, you might always be happy."

The Dragons in the past. Top: Robert Herjavec visits his hometown in Croatia and Kevin O'Leary in his youth.

Dianne Buckner is the weekend anchor on CBC News Network and host of Dragons' Den. The season finale airs tonight at 8 p.m. on CBC Television. Auditions for next season are underway. Check cbc.ca/dragonsden for details.

Because class sizes are capped at 20, students are able to take advantage of one-on-one training with instructors. This personalized system is of the utmost importance to the Academy's goals, explains Abigail St. Pierre, the events and marketing coordinator.

"We're investing in the students," she says. "That's why we want to take our time with them. We train them in hopes to hire them afterwards."

Le Cordon Bleu Culinary Arts Institute

Located in Ottawa, this college offers a 100-year tradition in French cuisine. The Grande Diplôme Professional program is a 10-month course that takes students from basic skills such as knife selection, preparing and selecting the right foods, to advanced skills like preparing their own dishes.

"Before you become a star chef you have to have the right tools and know how to use them correct-

As the creator of the course curriculum, Guet conducts a balancing act to teach students age-old cooking traditions with new, modern and evolving cuisine. He says by teaching the French chef's philosophy, students acquire an understanding and knowledge that they can apply to any form of cuisine.

The program includes an internship program where students work in a fine restaurant and are acclimated to the pressures of working in the challenging industry.

"We prepare them to work," says Guet.

The career of your dreams won't appear over night. It may be nine months away.

Career colleges like Medix Schools and Herzing College provide students with hands-on knowledge to pursue the career of their choice. The education process is expedited by eliminating electives and providing the students only with the skills they'll on the job.

Susan Waite-Price, community service worker instructor at Medix School in Toronto, says students benefit from small class sizes and the family atmosphere offered by the school. With opportunity for one-on-one instruction, students can receive the guidance they need to prepare themselves for 500 hours of field work, followed by a career in a growing industry.

"It's interesting the program is nine months," says Waite-Price. "because when I send them off I feel like I've given birth!"

But don't let the family atmosphere fool you — this program isn't for the weak-hearted. Community-service workers work with clients facing extreme circumstances like abuse, depression, homelessness and a number of other difficult issues.

"I'm going to shock you and trigger you," she says, "because the place for you to break down is in the classroom, not out in the field."

Some skills good community workers possess are their ability to display understanding, empathy, warmth and respect towards clients, Waite-Price says. Excellent listening skills are of the utmost importance.

"You must listen to the words," she says, "but also what's not being said"; referring to body language.

In Ottawa, Herzing College offers a one-year pharmacy technician program. The program is one of only a handful that's accredited by the Canadian Council for Accreditation of Pharmacy Programs.

It includes an eight-week field placement where students can work in hospital or community pharmacies.

One of the main differences between a pharmacy technician and a pharmacy assistant, explains Dave McCormick, vice-president of Herzing College, Ottawa, is the technician's training in administering IV pharmaceuticals in a hospital setting.

With a 94-per-cent employment rate upon graduation, it's an attractive program for those interested.

"You won't walk into a hospital or pharmacy in Ottawa without seeing Herzing grads," he says. "(at Herzing) you get the practical, hands-on skills for the job."

Unfortunately, says Waite-Price, the need for community service workers is also high, especially in economic crisis.

"It's too bad that's the case," she says, "but we have the job of helping people help themselves."

Carlos R

Carlos came to Trillium College in 2008 after working several years in retail. He always enjoyed working with people, and was a person who his friends and family went too when life had it's challenges. He met with one of the Trillium Colleges Registrars and they determined that a career in Community and Social Services was the best fit. He enrolled in the 45 week College Diploma program and graduated later that year, with honours. He did his 8 week placement at a Mental Health facility and did well, and they offered him a full time position after he finished his placement. He has worked there for a year now and enjoy working with members of the community who value his work and help. "Trillium College provided me with the training and tools to be a successful CSSW...."

Lisa B

Lisa enrolled in the Medical Office Administration program in 2009. She always worked in customer service and was hoping to find a career with more regular work and hours. She graduated with her Diploma in Medical Office Administration with honours. She obtained a career with a Chiropractic Office in her community. It is a small family business and she is very happy. "Trillium College gave me the skills and confidence to re-enter the professional workforce...the instructors were so supportive and knowledgeable" says Lisa.

Tina K

Tina came to Trillium College in 2009 to pursue her dream of working in a Dental Office as an Intra Oral Dental Assistant. She toured the school and liked the small classes and thought that would be best for her, as she had been out of school for several years. She had a young family and the regular schedule and taking one module at a time with regular evaluation, suited her best. "...I also appreciated the fact that I had my diploma in 50 weeks..." says Tina.

Tina was employed by a Dental Office near her home and has a flexible schedule that fits her family needs. She enjoys her work, and feels like she is helping her community.

Karla T

Karla always enjoyed working with numbers and decided that she was best suited to Accounting and Payroll. She enrolled in the Accounting and Payroll diploma program at Trillium College in 2008. She appreciated the small classes and individual instruction. She was hired by a small firm right after graduation and has since leveraged that experience and education to a Accounts Payable position with a larger company. Karla says "...the instructors went thru the Accounting and Microsoft programs and explained how we would be using them in the office environment....also learned the skills to go into business for ourselves...."

Trillium College is a registered Private Career College that has 8 campuses across Ontario (Ottawa, Oshawa, Kingston, Peterborough, Richmond Hill, Toronto, Burlington and St. Catharines) offering College Diploma courses in Health, Business and Social disciplines. ## TOURETTE SYNDROME... MORE THAN JUST A TIC

Tourette Syndrome (TS) is a neurological condition which affects 1 in 100 Canadians. TS is generally characterized by someone who has tics. There are different types of tics including eye blinking, coughing, hand flapping, head jerking, facial grimacing, knuckle cracking, biting mouth/lip, throat clearing, grunts, saying phrases such as "oh boy", stuttering, and complex breathing patterns. To complicate matters, most individuals struggle to live with the conditions closely linked to TS including Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder, Obsessive Compulsive Disorder, Anxiety, Depression, Sleep Disorders, to name a few.

Although there is no cure for TS, with your financial support the Ottawa Chapter of the Tourette Syndrome Foundation of Canada can continue to help those affected in the Ottawa region reach their goals and lead productive lives. Please help us help those in need.

Contract limited employee's rights

WorkplaceLaw

Daniel Lublin

Metronews.ca/workplacelaw

It's possibly the biggest mistake an employee can make: Requesting a written employment contract or worse, agreeing to one without understanding its terms.

How do these contracts affect employees?

When Morris Wernicke agreed to join Altrom Canada Group in 1997, he also agreed to a written employment contract. Wernicke, a chartered accountant, carefully read the contract and even sought the advice of his lawyer before agreeing to its terms.

The contract contained a clause that would permit Altrom to terminate Wernicke with the greater of 30 days' notice or the minimum amount he was supposed to receive under provincial legislation and a clause that the contract would continue to apply even if Wernicke's job later changed.

A few years later, Wernicke was promoted from controller to chief financial officer and given additional responsibilities, including oversight of human resources matters.

When Wernicke's position was eliminated in 2009, he was offered six months' severance. However, after 12 years of employment in a very senior role, Wernicke thought that he was entitled to much more.

At a recent trial in British Columbia, the company defended the case by arguing that Wernicke's original employment contract for the controller's position applied when he was terminated from a more senior role almost 12 years later. The court agreed. Although the contract significantly limited Wernicke's entitlement to severance, the court was not prepared to set it aside.

Victoria Falls takes you to the edge

Flying over Africa in a flimsy microlight plane will thrill even the hardened adrenalin junkie

NICK BOULOS
Metro World News

There are many ways to experience Africa's mighty Victoria Falls, which sit between Zimbabwe and Zambia but a microlight flight is undoubtedly the most thrilling.

As a result these flimsy aircraft circle the falls like vultures over a kill.

The jubilant faces returning from the air did nothing to calm my nerves as I climbed into the middle of wing and wire and pulled my seatbelt tightly. It was, after all, the only thing stopping me from plummeting 1,000 feet.

There's no hiding from the elements in a microlight. With no doors, windows or even a windscreen and only a handrail to grip, it's just you, the wind and the scenery.

The bright blue hang gliding wings reached out above me while the small engine behind me hummed away.

"Ready?" asked my pilot Pascal as he turned around to face me.

As I considered my response, the wheels started rolling.

The microlight rumbled down the short muddy runway and we were airborne.

Heart racing, I stole an immediate glance beyond where my feet now dangled freely. Huge clusters of acacia trees blurred into the forest green landscape and a lone giraffe grazed as we circled to gain altitude.

Soon we were hundreds of feet over the murky Zambezi River as it flowed towards the waterfalls where a million litres of water plunge over the 103m drop every second spewing spray high into the air.

The 1.7km wide falls — known locally as Mosi-oa-Tunya (The Smoke That Thunders) — were discovered in 1855 by Scottish explorer David Livingstone, who named them after the Africa's Victoria Falls sport a 103 m drop off, where a million litres of water passes over it everyday.

$2,000

Two nights on Sindabezi Island in Zambia on an all-inclusive basis and return flights from Johannesburg costs under $2,000 with To Escape To (toescape.to) reigning British monarch.

Now at our maximum altitude Pascal banked the microlight sharply for one more loop. We glided straight into the plume of spray directly above the falls.

Greyness closed in at every angle and fine droplets settled on my visor.

I thanked the good lord it wasn't me who was piloting our craft because I had completely lost visibility.

As the mist cleared and we turned back I caught one last glimpse of the majestic falls. From a far they look huge. From up close they are positively massive.

The ride was over before it began. Pascal landed the microlight with a bump and tug of the handlebar. A smile spread across my face as we rolled down runway as the next passenger waited nervously.

Microlight flights over the falls are available for $150.

Adrenalin junkie?

Our pick of the best white knuckle activities at Victoria Falls....

1 A white water ride:

Whether it's one or several days spent tackling the terrifying Grade 5+ rapids of the Zambezi, one of the world's most challenging white water rivers, this will easily satisfy a thirst for adventure. Trips are sometimes suspended between March and May when water levels are too high. Hold on tight.

2, 3, 2, 1 ... Bungee! Plummet towards the Zambezi by throwing yourself off the 111m high Victoria Falls Bridge, which was built in 1905 and links Zambia to Zimbabwe. Choose between a solo jump, tandem bungee or the Bridge Swing or do all three for the knockdown price of $50.

3 Take a dip: Enjoy the most memorable swim of your life at the very edge of the falls. Visit Livingstone Island between September and December and the low water level make it possible to splash around in Devil's Pool, just inches from the perilous drop. Vertigo sufferers need not apply.

Drift into the fall's mist

Aniston and Butler hook up in The Bounty Hunter

RICHARD CROUSE
for Metro Canada

In The Bounty Hunter, Jennifer Aniston and Gerard Butler work on the borders of their comfort zones. Butler is the titular character, a former cop so down on his luck he takes a gig tracking down his ex-wife (and alleged real-life girlfriend) Aniston, for a payday of $5,000.

"I felt this was a different role for her," says Butler of his co-star. "She is the Queen of Comedy and done a lot of romantic comedies, but this doesn't feel like a romantic comedy. It feels like an action driven comedy. She was playing a much bitchier, harder edged character than I think anyone has ever seen her do before and for me that is exciting."

Aniston, best known as Rachel from Friends, or Brad Pitt's ex wife, depending on your appetite for the tabloids, says she was attracted to the role because "it wasn't your traditional run of the mill girl meets guy, guy meets girl."

"It is an action comedy and a road movie with a little romance in there and a little suspense," she said recently in a sit-down with Metro in New York City.

She was, however, taken by surprise by the physical demands of the production. Doing stunts in four inch heels isn't as easy as it looks.

"Your adrenaline is going and you're not really feeling it at the moment and then I'd get home and notice a bruise here and a callous here," said Aniston, who adds she would consider other action roles in future. "Then there were the handcuffs. Try wearing those, attached to a car door for three days. Not fun."

For Butler, a Scottish heartthrob best known for his sculpted abs and roles in violent films like 300, the challenge wasn't the physical side, but breaking the action star stereotype. "My break in America was Attila the Hun, which went into Time Line, Tomb Raider, Reign of Fire and at that point I loved doing that, but it's not like when you are still making your way in the business that people go, 'Tomb Raider, Oh my God, the guy should be in a comedy.' I was waiting for the right opportunity. I thought I don't want to dive in with something crappy. I wanted to wait until I'm lucky enough to get the right script that felt right."

Mourners remember teen star Corey Haim

Grim-faced relatives, friends and fans of Corey Haim gathered at a north Toronto funeral home yesterday to remember the fallen teen icon.

The former heartthrob, best known for starring in a string of '80s films including Lucas, The Lost Boys and License to Drive, was honoured in a private ceremony in his hometown.

Haim's family asked for privacy while they gathered in the wake of his sudden death last week in Burbank, Calif., but that didn't stop more than a dozen reporters and fans from gathering in front of the chapel.

"Some people might say it's a little silly, you didn't know the person. It doesn't matter. You watch the person's movies ... and it becomes a part of your life. To me, it's kind of like a part of my childhood died," said Dan Pigeau, 31.

The baby-faced actor died in hospital with an enlarged heart, pulmonary congestion and water in his lungs. He was 38.

In recent years he spoke openly about a lengthy battle with drug addiction, but it was not known what role drugs may have played in his death.

Friend Heather Leikan, 31, a former neighbour who met Haim in 2001, said his mother Judy has been a "pillar" of strength.

Leikan remembered Haim as a friendly soul who was generous with his friends.

"He made nothing secret but he also didn't have anything to apologize for," Leikan said as she walked into the funeral home.

"When I met him he was living very modestly. One of the first times I hung out we went for a walk. What kind of guy asks you to go for a walk? I thought that was sweetest thing I'd ever heard."

Record-breaking deal

Jackson's $200 million recording contract

The estate of Michael Jackson has landed the late King of Pop the biggest recording deal in history: a $200 million guaranteed contract with Sony Music Entertainment for 10 projects over seven years, according to a person familiar with the deal.

The record-breaking contract through 2017 could be worth up to $250 million if certain conditions are met. One of the albums will be of never-before-released Jackson recordings that will come out in November, the person said.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the official announcement is expected Tuesday.

Future projects may also include a DVD compilation of videos and a re-release of Off the Wall, Jackson's fifth studio album, which first came out in 1979, accompanied by some unreleased material. Before his sudden death in June at age 50, the pop star had wanted to re-issue the album, people familiar with the deal said.

"This agreement with Sony Music demonstrates the lasting power of Michael's music by exceeding all previous industry benchmarks."

John Branca, co-administrator of Jackson estate

One of the projects already counted in the contract was the two-disc album that accompanied This Is It, the film based on footage of concert rehearsals for what was to have been Jackson's comeback at London's O2 arena.

Including the more than five million copies of that special release, Jackson has sold some 31 million albums since his death in June, about two-thirds of them outside the United States.

"During his life,

Michael's contracts set the standard for the industry," said John Branca, the co-administrator of the Jackson estate, in a statement prepared for release Tuesday. "By all objective criteria, this agreement with Sony Music demonstrates the lasting power of Michael's music by exceeding all previous industry benchmarks."

Rob Stringer, chairman of Sony Music's Columbia Epic Label Group, said in prepared remarks, "We're dedicated to protecting this icon's legacy and we're thrilled that we can continue to bring his music to the world for the foreseeable future."

Winfrey to defend defamation

LEGAL A federal judge says Oprah Winfrey must defend a defamation suit filed by the former headmistress of her girls' school in South Africa.

Oprah Winfrey

The case is now set for trial March 29 in Philadelphia.

Judge Eduardo Robreno refused to dismiss the suit in a decision Monday.

He says former headmistress Nomvuyo Mzamane has enough evidence to pursue claims Winfrey defamed her. Winfrey made the remarks in 2007 after sex-abuse complaints surfaced at her school for poor girls near Johannesburg.

A dorm matron who worked under Mzamane was charged with abusing students.

Winfrey's lawyer, William Hangle, declined comment Tuesday on the decision.

Mzamane's lawyer did not immediately return a call for comment.

A real American hero?

WOULD YOU TRUST THIS MAN WITH KEYS TO AN ARMOURY?

Spencer Pratt announced this week he's fleeing The Hills for a job at American Defense Enterprises, a self-defense company that offers "world-class training in the entire spectrum of small arms weaponry."

The reality star told People he discovered a new passion in life, working for the Los Angeles-based company in their cyber security division.

To those thinking this was another one of Pratt's media "gotchas," well, you'd be wrong.

PopEater spoke with Pratt's new boss, A.D.E.

head Bill Beasley, who insists the 26-year-old star is sincere and determined to "help do something good for a change."

Contrary to reports, the Hills star is not leaving his hit MTV show, a source tells us—magazine.com.

"All of that stuff about him leaving The Hills to fight cybercrime is not true," the insider insists.

The real story?

"He is leaving The Hills for six weeks because he was asked to."

The

source explains that Pratt, 26, recently "flipped out" on the show's set after a female producer made a request to which he objected.

"Very rattled" by Pratt's outburst, the producer filed a complaint with the show's top producers—who then threatened to kick Pratt off the show.

THE GIRL'S GOT GRIT Poison singer Bret Michaels—who has collaborated with the Miley Cyrus on their new single Nothing to Lose—is in awe of the 17-year-old singer-and-actress because she stands up for what she believes in.

He said: "Does she stir s— up? No. What I think that she does is she doesn't take any s—. I love that about her. I've seen it. 'I've seen people come at her, come at me, and we're both the same. I set them straight,' he said.

"A lot of times when you live in that Hollywood limelight, speaking your piece or doing your thing is organic and more controversial than people trying to be controversial."

Discussing whether or not Cyrus likes to create scandals, he added to America's OK! magazine: "I think the exact opposite ... I think she's got a strong backbone."

The future looks bright

ARE THEY OUT OF THE WOODS? Tiger Woods was spotted with his wife Elin for the first time since his sex scandal broke last November, usmagazine.com reports.

The two were spotted taking a stroll around their Isleworth gated community in Windermere, Fla., Saturday morning.

Walking several feet behind her husband, Elin, 30, wore a Nike bandana. (Interestingly, Nike is the one major sponsor that hasn't dropped Woods.)

In his hyped-up public apology on Feb. 19, Woods refused to reveal whether he and his wife were splitting.

He also denied rumours that she assaulted him when she learned of his affair with Rachel Uchitel.

He praised his wife's "enormous grace and poise" and said that he and Elin have "started the process of discussing the damage caused by my behaviour ... My real apology will not come in the form of words, but my behaviour over time."

"We have a lot to discuss. What we say to each other will remain between the two of us."

They just want her healthy

THAT'S WHY THEY'RE TALKING ABOUT SALES

There has been a big debate about whether Gabourey Sidibe's weight will hamper her future career, despite her recent Oscar nomination, popeater.com reports.

Now, one weight loss company has written a letter to the Precious star, telling her she needs to worry about her health—not her image, TMZ reports.

AssaiSupply.com has offered the actress a one-year's supply of their product to help her lose weight.

As—

saiSupply's publicist Kevin Blatt tells PopEater, "We have seen a large increase in sales today, but we have not yet heard from Ms. Sidibe. We are really hoping to. We want to help her maintain a healthy lifestyle."

"She has amazing potential, Oprah believes in her, and she could someday be on that stage accepting an Oscar. We can only put it out there for her, we hope she takes us up on our offer."

The bomb has been diffused

AND FOR ONCE SHE'S NOT TALKING ABOUT HER BODILY FUNCTIONS

Continuing to hit back at former boyfriend John Mayer for revealing details about their sex life, Jessica Simpson says gossiping isn't the only dumb thing she's seen Mayer do, people.com reports.

"I thought he was stupid for breaking up with me," Simpson, 29, said on ABC's The View earlier this week.

Asked if she's spoken to Mayer, 32, since he likened her to "sexual napalm in a Playboy interview," Simpson said she hadn't, and then added with a laugh: "And he'll never have this napalm again."

The singer and actress, whose new show The Price of Beauty premiered Monday night on VH1, says she's still feeling the effects of Mayer's comments.

"I'll walk into a restaurant or something, and I notice that more men are looking at me, but I feel like they're undressing me," she says.

"So, it's a little bit embarrassing."

a month-and-a-half," she tells Vogue.

The supermodel, who says she gave birth to son Benjamin last December in a bathtub in the Boston penthouse she shares with husband Tom Brady, originally wanted to name the baby River.

"I wanted something always flowing, immortal," she says.

"My husband said, 'There's no way we're going to call him River.'"

1/2 tsp rosemary, minced
3/4 tsp salt
1 cup chicken broth
1/2 cup dry vermouth
4 boneless, skinless chicken thighs
1/4 cup chopped parsley

METHOD:

1. Preheat oven to 350°F (180°C). Combine oil, potatoes, celery, carrots, garlic, tarragon, rosemary and salt in Dutch oven or flameproof casserole. Toss to combine.

2. Add broth and vermouth to pan and bring to boil over medium heat. Reduce to simmer, cover and cook 10 minutes.

3. Add chicken, cover and place in oven. Bake until chicken is cooked through and potatoes and garlic are tender, 30 minutes. Stir in parsley just before serving

MARCH 21-APRIL 20

Stick to what you know and trust. Changing fashions can be seductive but just because there is a new way of doing things does not mean it will be better.

LIBRA
SEPT 23-OCT 23

If you feel trapped by a relationship, try mentioning that you need more time to yourself. If you say it the right way chances are they will understand.

TAURUS
APRIL 21-MAY 21

There are some things you must never reveal about yourself, no matter how tempted you may be to come clean and hope that others understand.

SCORPIO
OCT 24-NOV 22

Let others lead the way and make suggestions, but don't let them use you as a guinea pig. If there is something risky they want to try let them go first.

GEMINI
MAY 22-JUNE 21

There is a magnetic quality to your personality that will attract good things to you today — along with one or two bad things as well.

SAGITTARIUS
NOV 23-DEC 21

You should be feeling both more relaxed and more affectionate now. If not, don't worry, because the good times will begin soon.

CANCER
JUNE 22-JULY 22

As a cardinal sign you are rarely happy with a mid-level position. You were born for life at the top and you won't rest until you are Number One.

CAPRICORN
DEC 22-JAN 20

Sometimes you can be too suspicious, so give friends and relatives the benefit of the doubt today. It's nicer for them and nicer for you.

LEO
JULY 23-AUG 23

You may have tried something and failed a dozen times before but this time you are going to get it right. This time you can't lose.

AQUARIUS
JAN 21-FEB 18

The more friends and work colleagues try to press you to follow a certain path the more you will enjoy following a different path entirely.

VIRGO
AUG 24-SEPT 22

The best way to deal with a difficult situation is to pretend it does not exist. This is one of those times when, by focusing on something, you give it power.

PISCES
FEB 19-MARCH 20

There is no point being too serious today. With the Sun in your sign forming a major union with Uranus, you really have nothing to worry about.
